Eile {Border-Fictioning} is the long-term work on sovereign borders by Sheffield-based artist duo a place of their own. Exploring the Irish and UK relationship, the programme comprises conversations as well as an immersive, otherworldly exhibition at Bloc Projects of sound, film and a special performance on the opening night. The programme falls under the artists' broader project Eile, which looks at global identity and citizenship, movement and migration through

a place of their own is the art and spatial research practice of Paula McCloskey and Sam Vardy. Through their multidisciplinary work, they interrogate and propose within entanglements of climate, capital, technology and politics. They operate as a collective, a couple, with their children and through collaborations with others.
