

Call for papers: Case studies of applied health psychology practice, implementation and knowledge translation experiences

Ainslea Cross

University of Derby

Since our Spring 2019 call for papers (Cross & Sheffield, 2019) for the new Health Psychology Practice, Consultancy and Training section of Health Psychology Update (HPU) we have been fortunate to receive articles highlighting the value and impact of health psychology in practice within varied settings and contexts. We have featured practice articles on working as a health psychologist in community settings for adults with learning disabilities (Bains & Turnbull, 2019), public health (Lawes-Wickwar & Begum, 2020), the NHS (Anderson 2019) and the development of a student-delivered University health coaching service (Cooper, Allan, Dunsmore, Johnston & Leighton-Beck, 2020).

To build on our progress in raising the profile of applied health psychology practice, we would like to invite articles on the following themes: (1) knowledge translation, featuring experiences of translating research into practice; (2) implementation, experiences of designing and delivering applied health psychology practice or interventions. We invite a range of flexible formats for presenting your work such as reflective accounts, case study reports or protocols of works in progress and lessons learned to date. HPU aims to provide an opportunity for anyone working in applied health psychology to share their work and projects in order to raise the profile of health psychology. If you would like to share your work with the health psychology community, please email your expression of interest to: hpu.professional@outlook.com and hpu.editor@outlook.com.

References

- Cross, A. & Sheffield, D. (2019). Raising the profile of health psychology training, consultancy and practice issues through a new Health Psychology Update sub-section: Call for papers. Health Psychology Update, Volume 28, Issue 1, 38-39.
- Bains, K & Turnbull, T. (2019). Health promotion in two community contexts with adults with learning disabilities: Key considerations for practice. Health Psychology Update, Volume 28, Issue 2, 42-51.

Anderson, N. (2019). What can trainee health psychologists' competencies contribute to the NHS? Health Psychology Update, Volume 28, Issue 2, 52-54.

Lawes-Wickwar, S. & Begum, S. (2020). Working in public health as a health psychologist: Challenges, solutions and opportunities. Health Psychology Update, Volume 29, Issue 1.

Cooper, C., Allan, J., Dunsmore, J., Johnston, M. & Leighton-Beck, L (2020). Embedding practitioner skills in Health Psychology training: Development of a student-delivered health coaching service. Health Psychology Update, V Volume 29. Issue 1.

Author:

Dr Ainslea Cross, Academic Lead for Health Psychology, University of Derby Online Learning; hpu.professional@outlook.com.